2. These bodies are the members of the Lord;
Ours and yet His, for use and honor too:
In sympathy and love and sweet accord
So one, that nought that oneness can undo.

3. In us that Spirit dwells that dwells in Him;
The Spirit of the Father and the Son.
Though poor the temple, and the glory dim,
Still does the Spirit claim it for His own.

4. O holy oneness between earth and heaven;
Each is the other, and yet not the same.
Not fellowship alone to us is given,
But unity of nature and of name.

5. He still the Son of God on yonder throne,
And we the sons of earth, yet dwelling here;
Yet we with Him, He with us truly one,
As if one heart were ours, one home, one sphere.

6. Upon His holy throne, these members yet
Shall all be seated, in that day when He,
The head of the great unity, shall sit
With them to share one common royalty.
